LIAR LIAR PANTS ON FIRE!

By Dr. Pierre J. Samaan

Remember in elementary school when one student exposed another student's lie? Then all the students, as if they are on the cast of Glee, point and chant, "liar liar pants on fire!" O.K., that was a long time ago! But, there is one thing that has never changed in this world, there have always been liars among us. Now, I am not talking about that occasional lie, for which all of us are guilty. I am talking about those individuals who seem to make a habit or living out of lying.

According to Answers.com, only 12% of people will admit to lying sometimes or often. Believe it or not, the profession with the highest lying numbers is Teachers with a whopping 65% admitting to telling lies. You are most likely to be lied to between 9 to 9:30 PM. If you want the truth from someone, the most likely time to have it revealed is in the early morning hours. The most honest people in the world are Australians, Norwegians, Swedes, and Belgians, in that order. And, researchers found that President Richard Nixon was the most extravagant liar with on the record 837 lies in one day.¹

The truth is, we are all liars because of our sin nature. As followers of the Messiah Jesus Christ, we are beginning a process of practicing truth rather than lies. "But he who practices the truth comes to the Light, so that his deeds may be manifested as having been wrought in God." (John 3:21 NASB)

Lying is a sin, an offense to God that prevents us from fellowship with Him. It was the shedding of the blood of Jesus Christ that paid for the offense of all sins, allowing us eternal fellowship with God. Yet, we go on sinning in our thinking and behaving because of our sin nature. "Stop lying to each other; tell the truth, for we are parts of each other and when we lie to each other we are hurting ourselves." (Ephesians 4:25 TLB)

We call ourselves Christians because we believe in Jesus Christ. This belief compels us to be obedient to God's teachings on how we should live our lives. In so doing, we have surrendered our dark state of mind to God's light and truth through the filling of the Holy Spirit. This is God's Spirit that gives us insight or wisdom into the very essence of God. His truth becomes a light that dispels the darkness which prevented us from understanding Him. What was unknown becomes known. Our continuing sinful thoughts and behavior will over time, decrease in frequency and severity.

I have said this to help you understand that we may continue to lie, but with each passing day, week, month, and year, the sin behavior of lying (and other sins) will dissipate to a trickle for a true Christian. "For nothing is hidden that will not become evident, nor anything secret that will not be known and come to light." (Luke 8:17 NASB)

The compulsive liar who is genuine in his/her conversion to Christianity should treat lying as a spiritual and behavioral addiction that will dissipate with focused inner healing through Christian Counseling. "The secret of the LORD is for those who fear Him, And He will make them know His covenant. . .Blessed are those who wash their robes, so that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter by the gates into the city." (Psalm 25:14; Revelation 22:14 NASB)

To help protect yourself, here are some tips in helping to identify if someone is lying. Remember to pray that the Holy Spirit will reveal the truth.

- Does the person you are observing realize when they are lying? The addictive/compulsive liar more often than not, does not realize they fabricated something. During those times of believing their own lies to be the truth, they genuinely believe they are telling the truth, which makes you feel they are being genuine.
- Pay attention to facial and body movements when the addictive/compulsive liar replies to a question or tells a story. Most people will display a "tell" when lying. Pupils may enlarge, breathing deepens or becomes shallow, pulse rate increases, facial tics or twitches can be observed, rubbing their face or head with their hand, restlessness or fidgeting, eyes looking down to their left, or fixed on your eyes...etc.
- Pay attention to the frequency of lies. Someone can be considered a liar because he/she lies once in a while. But, a compulsive liar will lie frequently and will not stop even if they are caught in a lie. It is a bad habit that has turned into a compulsive behavior. Some would argue that it has turned into an addictive behavior when they become addicted to the stimulation/thrill of lying and getting away with it.
- Pay attention to how that person seems to lie with ease. A compulsive/addictive liar will not appear uncomfortable or nervous when lying. When lying behavior starts early in life, the addictive/compulsive liar appears a natural at it as they mature in their lies. They appear comfortable both telling a lie, as well as telling the truth.

- Pay attention to the types of lies. An addictive/compulsive liar will lie about anything. You will find yourself confused as to why the addictive/compulsive liar would fabricate something that is meaningless. Focus on the types of things that the person lies about.
- Think about the reason the liar would have to lie. Emotionally immature people will try to get themselves out of a situation by lying. They will also lie if it is beneficial. For an addictive/compulsive liar, on the other hand, lying becomes a life style where the absence of lying would be very uncomfortable for them.
- If you are questioning whether someone is an addictive/compulsive liar, try to learn if they appear to have characteristics of a personality disorder. The exaggerated fear of abandonment or rejection or all or nothing thinking can be signs of personality disturbances. These people may either have an exaggerated need for attention or need to be left alone, so they can feel better about themselves. The addictive/compulsive liar will display either no emotions or expressions, or they will display vengeful emotions because of their fear you will see their weaknesses.
- Notice if they keep changing their story. Oh, what a tangled web we weave when we play the game to deceive. I once treated a Christian with over thirty identities (multiple personalities or DID). I documented the characteristics of every one of them. During the entire five years of helping her, she proved she was not lying because she never became confused about her numerous stories or the many personalities. Because of their lying behavior, the addictive/compulsive liar will have trouble keeping his/her story straight. When caught in a lie, they will minimize it or make excuses like, "I forgot...It's been long ago...I didn't sleep well last night...You're judging me..."

Cecil Rhodes' Remorse

Considered to be the instigator of the war between the English and South African Boers, Cecil Rhodes became a very wealthy man during his life. He was obsessed with acquiring wealth from the rich natural resources of South Africa. However, during his death watch, he cried out in regret, "I've found much in Africa - diamonds, gold, and land are mine, but now I must leave them all behind. Not a thing I've gained can be taken with me. Eternal treasures that abide I have not sought; therefore, I actually have nothing at all!"²

NEW RESEARCH FINDINGS

NEW RESEARCH SHOWS INVOLVED PARENTS ARE LESS LIKELY TO RAISE A CHILD WHO BULLIES

With all of the media attention on young people being tormented by bullies and cyberbullies, parents may wonder what they can do to protect their children. The question they may want to ask instead is how can they prevent their child from becoming a bully. Read article at:
